

Q1 'Culm Garden Village' is a working name for the new settlement to the east of Cullompton. Do you have any ideas for a name for the new garden village?

1	Cullompton East or East Cullompton. The words 'garden' and 'village' should not be used. The proposed density of housing per hectare (which we were told is similar to Cranbrook) renders the term 'garden' misleading and the scale of the proposed development exceeds normal perceptions of village size.	3/4/2019 5:08 PM
2	Stoneyford? To be building on such a large area of prime agricultural land when we should be aiming to become more sustainable seems wrong.	3/4/2019 4:45 PM

14	According to National Geographic "A village is a small settlement usually found in a rural setting. It is generally larger than a "hamlet" but smaller than a "town". Some geographers specifically define a village as having between 500 and 2,500 inhabitants" The proposed, so called Culm Garden Village will be much bigger than this and it is, therefore completely misleading to describe it as a village at all. on the other hand The NG describes as town as "A town is usually a place with a lot of houses" 5000 houses is therefore a town and not a village. It is totally wrong to describe it as a village indeed page 4 calls it a town and I am guessing these houses will have little or no gardens so it cannot be called a garden village. It might just as well be called Cullompton East with links be made between the two areas otherwise in time to come the two communities will be divided when any new facilities could be shared.	3/1/2019 7:13 PM

46	The front page of the Vision and Concept Document shows the A 373 running through green fields. These are the very green fields that MDDC are looking to bulldoze. This Vision and Concept document is more like a holiday brochure and a pretty poor one at that. It is full of hot air and supposition. The questions posed in the questionnaire that MDDC wanted people to fill in are 'loaded' and 'Leading' in a manner to provide MDDC with the answers they seek. Hence I refuse to fill one in and am writing this instead. But you did want ideas about names for Culm Garden Village. My suggestion is UGLEY. There is a village in Essex by this name. So if the Garden village does happen, might I suggest that its twinned with it!	2/28/2019 4:18 PM

64	No. If the development includes 5,000 houses then it would be new town and not a village.	2/27/2019 8:01 PM
65	No but I would suggest it is not a village. Using the word Village is mis-leading. It is also insulting to a true villages culture and identity	2/27/2019 7:42 PM
66	I consider it somewhat presumptuous, naive and patronising to ask for suggested names ahead of full consultations or full planning permission having been granted. Other issues have greater priority.	2/27/2019 6:14 PM
67	I suggest the "village" is formally made part of Cullompton. This would help both communities to work together given their close proximity, helping to fulfil the aim "to support the integrity of Cullompton & to further integration between the existing and new settlement areas"	2/27/2019 12:48 PM

71	This settlement will not require a new name as it is essentially an extension to Cullompton, which is planned to intrude into the parish of Kentisbeare. Therefore street names etc. would be sufficient.	2/26/2019 7:43 PM
72	some thing more traditional using local landmarks -let locals suggest and vote	2/26/2019 7:12 PM

75	The name Village implies a small community that has developed over many years and has a strong identity. The size of the proposed Garden Village dwarfs Cullompton and potentially will have a bigger population. Cullompton has suffered years of deprivation and lack of investment despite a lot of recent residential building. It is difficult to see how the two communities will integrate together and not as two separate towns. The current lack of local employment will not provide jobs for new residents moving to the Village let alone those living in Cullompton town. The questionnaire asks for a suggested name for the Garden Village – mine is Culm Folly. 'Village' is definitely a misnomer for the proposed development equivalent to the size of Cullompton town.	2/26/2019 5:14 PM

81	No the settlement is to big and not wanted.	2/25/2019 10:40 PM
82	I have tried to follow three principles: 1. Given that most placenames in this part of Devon are Saxon, I have tried to use Anglo-Saxon placename elements. 2. These are often combined with personal names (e.g. Sampford Peverell from the Peverell family name) 3. It would be good to work Culm into the name. There are several places in the area with Culm as part of the name: Cullompton, Uffculme, Culmstock, Columbjohn, Culm Pyne. This leads me to three suggestions, all of which are unique names as far as I can tell. Culm Morton. The Moore family were important local landowners in the around the new garden village and Moorhayes lies around the centre of the settlement. It is also a pun – we are getting more town! Culm William. There are many Williams in Cullompton's history: William of Cullompton, the last prior of St Nicholas Priory which once owned the church and it's lands in Cullompton; William the Conqueror who gave Cullompton church to Battle Abbey; William who held the manor of Ponsford at the time of Domesday; William Pole, noted antiquary who held lands which will be part of the new settlement and William Crompton who was a dissenting minister in the town. Alfredsweek. Alfred's village - named after King Alfred the Great who once owned the manor of Cullompton. Also references Week Farm which is in the middle of the area of the settlement.	2/24/2019 5:41 PM

139	The use of the word village is very misleading. It is too large (bigger than the town of Cullompton) to be considered as a village. I am uncomfortable with the word garden because I am not convinced it will truly have enough green spaces and gardens... I think it should be part of the existing town of Cullompton which already has an area on the side of the M5 proposed for the new settlement.	2/9/2019 5:06 PM
